Fun Wedding Facts and Ideas

Flowers... Early Roman brides carried bunches of herbs, most often rosemary to symbolize fidelity, fertility and scare off evil spirits. The Greeks carried ivy, symbolizing endless love. The Victorians were fascinated with the meanings of different blooms, and they popularized the wedding rose, which represented true love.

Money Dance... Do you cringe at the idea of the money dance, although it is custom in your family? Why not request that the guests write down advice or best wishes on a piece of paper as payment in lieu of money!

Honeymoon... Medieval newlyweds would spend a month alone together, enjoying mead, a fermented honey drink (honey is an ancient symbol of life, health and fertility) until the moon waned, hence the term honeymoon. Unfortunately, today's honeymooners rarely get a month off after the wedding!

Photo Booth... do you want your guests to have a unique favor and do you want to know what your guests are up to behind the scenes? Add a photo booth! your guests will receive a copy of their photo and you will get a copy of their crazy antics!

Wearing White... The ancient Romans chose white as their color of celebration over 2,000 years ago. And as hard as it is to believe, it wasn't until the Victorian era, when Queen Victoria wore white when she married her beloved Prince Albert that white meant purity and virginity, but today it is again the color of joy and celebration which means any bride can wear it.

Kids... Have a kids' section for the event. Most of the time, kids find dress-up events like weddings very tedious and are usually bored and tired at the end of it. Let them have a bit of fun by making sure they have their own little area during the event, with plenty of games and food to keep them entertained

Bouquet & Garter Toss... The bride originally tossed her bouquet to a friend as she left the festivities to keep that person safe (the warding off evil spirits) and to offer her luck. This came to mean that the single woman who caught the bouquet would marry next. The origins of the garter toss are humorous - Guests would literally rip off pieces of the bride's gown for luck, so to defend herself she began to throw her garter to them! These days, the groom removes it from her leg and tosses it to his bachelor pals.

Favors... When the wedding invitations go out, you ask the guests to enclose their favourite recipe with the response card. When the response cards come back, you take all the recipes sent to you by your family and friends and make recipe books to give all the guests as wedding favors. The cover of the book might feature a photo of the bride and groom in a kitchen with aprons on etc.

Cake... In earlier days, bread was broken over the Bride's head - the wheat promised fertility. In the 17th century, a French baker decided to frost a stack of buns - creating the world's first tiered wedding cake!

Candy... Since a marriage in a way symbolizes the couple's transformation from being footloose to being responsible, one of the apt ways to say goodbye to one's "childhood" is to arrange for a wedding candy buffet. Keep candies of different colors in containers of numerous sizes and shapes. To decorate the wedding candy buffet, have the couple's childhood photographs all around it. Keep empty containers on the side and have the guests pick their own candies to take home with them.

Kiss... In ancient Rome a kiss sealed a contract, so your smooch at the altar is, in a way, legally binding. In more recent traditions, and the belief that we like better, (its so much more romantic) is that when a couple kiss, part of their soul is exchanged.
